Objective: Human rights are inherent and inalienable rights which every human being is entitled to. These rights are necessary to ensure the dignity of every person as a human being irrespective of one's race, religion, nationality, language, sex or any other factor. Though the concept of human rights has assumed a profound significance throughout the world, people have not so far been able to fully enjoy its fruits. Over the years, particularly since the recent few years, human rights have been confronted with some serious challenges in the contemporary society. For better realization of human rights, we need Human Rights Education in our society. Human Rights Education is crucial for making the individuals aware of their rights as well as duties.

Outcome: Human Rights Education is a comprehensive term. Education is one of the most important tools in bringing about socio-economic and cultural progress of a country. However, education does not simply mean acquiring a lot of information but also its righteousness and use within the framework of a spectrum of ethical values. To create and develop awareness about the values, their significance and role is the aim of value-based education. Therefore, there is urgent need for provision of human rights education as it will play a significant role in providing proper direction to our youth to inculcate a positive attitude in them, and teach them how to make distinction between right and wrong. Moreover, it teaches them to be compassionate, helpful, peace-loving, enjoyable and sustainable future.
